A five-member committee (UGC) headed by eminent scientist Jitendra Nath Thakur, which was constituted by the Union Government on November 2, 2014, has released a 13-page report which states that the major industrial projects like 'Featherweight' and 'Make in India' cannot materialise without reduction in international trade. The report released by the committee, headed by Dr. Thakur, in Hindi language, has stated that the 'Make in India' and 'Featherweight' schemes do not address the real issues facing the country and the changes that are needed for the economy to make a positive transition. It has also given suggestions on how the two schemes can be implemented to address the issues which make the real economy weak. The report says that reduction in international trade, on account of the U.S. President's decision on the imposition of punitive trade measures on India, is dragging down economic growth and limiting the scope for certain activities which are needed for competitiveness. It has also highlighted that there are several issues, which can be addressed by the Government, such as infrastructure, power and industrial infrastructure to make the country more productive, without relying heavily on imports of natural resources. The report says that closing the border with China and creating restrictions in imports can help the country achieve the objectives of generating self-sufficiency in natural resources and reducing reliance on imports. It notes that a large number of Indian industries, both public and private, have been placed at a disadvantage, since local producers do not have access to components or technology from abroad. The committee proposes that various government schemes for 'Make in India' and 'Featherweight' should be "re-designed, re-planned and re-launched", and that these schemes should be "tailored to meet a specific need of any industry". The report also cites the National Manufacturing Policy, which does not address the issues that a manufacturing economy is subject to and therefore is not relevant to the real economy. Dr. Thakur has also stated that the policy does not examine the need for the
