Disclaimer: Use at your own risk!.Japanese Utility Model Publication No. 55-52657 (JP '567) discloses a vehicle hydraulic pressure transmitting system having a timing belt transmission system and an automatic transmission on the same shaft. In the case of this system, hydraulic pressure applied to a hydraulic pressure control valve, is transmitted to a clutch as needed, that is, while the vehicle is moving. Japanese Patent Application Laid-open (Kokai) No. 11-165466 (JP '466) discloses a vehicle hydraulic pressure transmitting system having a hydraulic pressure control valve for fixing or releasing the clutch. The system disclosed in JP '567 includes a first clutch to be engaged under the application of hydraulic pressure to the hydraulic pressure control valve.

Also, the timing belt transmission system includes a first clutch. In this case, in order to prevent the application of clutch hydraulic pressure from being switched to the first clutch at the start of the clutch operation, the hydraulic pressure control valve is operable to apply hydraulic pressure to a second clutch, which rotates together with the timing belt at a predetermined speed, after the first clutch has been engaged. In the case
